

DEWALT®

IMPORTANT SAFETY NOTICE

We have identified a potential safety issue with some of our hammer drill/drill drivers. Under very unusual circumstances the switch on these drills can overheat. Although there have been no reports of any injuries associated with this issue, a safety risk cannot be ruled out at this stage.

The potential problem only affects a limited number of models in our extensive range. There have been no reports of any injuries with these models, but we are taking the precaution of replacing the switches on them, free of charge. Users with one of the models covered by this action are requested to stop using their hammer drill/drill driver, remove the battery and contact their nearest service agent to arrange a refurbishment.

AFFECTED MODEL NUMBERS AND DATE CODES

Model Number	Description	Date Code
 DC940	XRP™ (13mm) 12 Volt Heavy Duty Drill Driver	2006 26 to 2007 45
 DC945	XRP™ (13mm) 12 Volt Heavy Duty Hammer Drill/Driver	2006 26 to 2007 45
 DC935	XRP™ (13mm) 14.4 Volt Heavy Duty Hammer Drill/Driver	2006 26 to 2007 45

HOW TO IDENTIFY MODEL NUMBER AND DATE CODE

The model number of the drill/drivers can be found on the face of the nameplate, which is located on the right side of the drill/driver.

The date code on the drill/drivers can be found on the underside of the foot of the unit where the battery is inserted (first 6 digits)

The affected hammer drills/drill drivers were sold in kits. For unpacked products, both the kit catalogue numbers and the date codes can be found on the bottom left underside of the cardboard sleeve. The date codes are the same as set out above, and the kit catalogue numbers begin either DC935, DC940 or DC945.

IF YOUR CORDLESS DRILL IS AFFECTED

Please stop using the tool immediately and remove the battery. Contact your nearest Service Agent to arrange a free refurbishment. You can find details of your nearest Service Agent on www.2helpu.com or www.DEWALT.ie
